20 MEN ROSENTHAL DEATH PLOT

that the assassination of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, in front of the Hotel Metropole just before he was to lift the curtain from all of the graft transactions between the police and gamblers, was carefully rehearsed before the gambler was killed. At least twenty men, according to the District Attorney, had part in the preparations and helped stage the tragedy. With five men under arrest and charged with complicity in the assassination of Rosenthal, and another held as a material witness, the long arm of the police was stretched out over the American mainland.

The original picking of the men who were to kill Rosenthal, which is alleged to have started Sunday afternoon, July 17. The victims were taken to the city morgue. The firing of Rosenzweig into the river was the last act of the riot. The preparation of the victims for burial was completed by the city coroner's office. The victims during the night. The final disposition of the men who rode away in the early automobile. For all of this work it is charged that the city coroner's office was at Sixth avenue and Broadway was the final base of operations. Rosenzweig himself was the only one who was not organization bearing his name, are the last two men to be placed in the line under the charge of having part in the crime.

MRS. GRACE FACES TRIAL

ATLANTA, July 22.—The trial of Mrs. Daisy Ulrich O'Grady, accused of attempting to murder her husband, Eugene H. Grace, as he lay dying in bed, and for five past months the central figure in one of the most amazing cases that ever stirred the South, was scheduled to open today in this city. It is expected the trial will prove one of the most sensational ever held in this State.

Mrs. Grace, formerly the widow of a wealthy Philadelphia merchant and known in that city as "Daisy of the Longard Spots," is to sit aside the longard Spots, in the trial of her husband, Eugene H. Grace, who was shot in the chest by her hand, and is now in a hospital in this city.

Grace, who is said to be brought from the hospital to the courtroom today, accused his wife of shooting him to obtain $27,000 worth of insurance he had taken out on his life for her benefit. The excitement of the trial, the intense heat, with a serious effect on Grace.

In the case today appear some of the best known lawyers in the South. Interested in the trial is nationwide, not only because of the prominence of the wife in society circles, but also because of the mystery which surrounded the shooting of Grace on March 5, last, in his Atlanta home.

Not all of this veil of mystery has been dispelled, for the police are still baffled by several important details in the remarkable case.

Maintains Innocence.
Grace, who is twenty-eight years old and who married the wealthy widow a year ago, is bitter in denying his accusations.

Mrs. Grace, who is forty, maintains her innocence.

There is another woman involved in the case, she says, "If I am tried, I will tell the whole miserable story on the stand."

The startling feature in the case has been the disclosure of the fact that Grace, who is said to be a wealthy man, has been in the city since the shooting of Grace on March 5, last, in his Atlanta home.

Not all of this veil of mystery has been dispelled, for the police are still baffled by several important details in the remarkable case.

Phone Call for Help.
The story has the beginning in the ring of a telephone at police headquarters in this city, about noon of Tuesday, March 5.

Over the line to the ear of the dead sergeant who responded came a feeble call for help. Instant investigation showed whether the call had come. A detail of police was rushed to the scene.

Every door of the house was found locked. The police had to force an entrance. In an attempt to break in, they found Grace, unconscious, with a bullet wound in the side. In a room on the floor below the police found a revolver, with one chamber loaded.

Grace was hurried to the hospital in the hope of saving him and finally revived him.

He was shot while asleep, said Grace. "And I have been in the city since the shooting of Grace on March 5, last, in his Atlanta home."

The police then turned their attention to a search for the wife of the dead sergeant. He had gone to Newman, it was learned. It was at Newman several hours later.

NEWPORT DANCE EDICT IS DEFIED

NEWPORT, July 22.—The younger people in the Summer colony protest the edict of several leading society matrons. Mrs. Margaret Fish that Saturday night dancing must not be allowed to run into Sunday morning. Leaders in the younger set declare that if they are not permitted to dance by their orders, they will seek a place where they can dance as they please—until daylight Sunday if they want.

MAY DEFER "L" STROKE REPORT

Governor Evans today expected to receive the report of the State Board of Cancellation and Arbitration upon the Elevated streetcar strike.

Edward F. Supple, secretary of the State Board of Arbitration and Cancellation, announced that the board's findings in the investigation of the Elevated strike were not yet fully completed. He said:

"The report is not yet ready. It might possibly be ready late today, but in all probability will not be ready until tomorrow or perhaps Wednesday."

A vast amount of testimony taken at the hearing has had to be reviewed.

Meanwhile the Central Labor Union postponed action on a general strike pending the board's report. Both Governor Evans and Mayor Fitzgerald are expected to take action at some time in a settlement of the strike.

Views of Two Commissioners.
It is understood that the three members of the board that the strike was due to the discharge of a number of the men for joining the union.

It is said that two of the Commissioners hold the Boston Elevated Railroad Company responsible for the conditions obtaining as a result of the strike.

It is further understood that two of the board favor a recommendation that the company take back all employees except those who have been guilty of violence since the strike started.

Conceded for the strikers, James H. Valley, contended that the main point at issue was whether or not the discharges had been due to joining the union. Mr. Valley is satisfied that the victory now goes to the strikers.

Board Advises Delay.
The recommendation of the executive board of the L. I. C. which was adopted by vote of the delegates reads:

"That the matter of a general strike be left in the hands of the executive committee, they to continue their efforts to bring about an adjustment, and no action to be taken by the body until the State Board of Cancellation and Arbitration gives its report."

STOREKEEPERS TO ADVANCE THE PRICE OF MILK
The price of milk in all stores is to be advanced to plus cents a quart, it now seems certain that dealers are dissatisfied with the cut down in their gross profits since the wholesalers jumped the price of the milk and a half quart a cent.

Contractors say that milk delivered by wagon to the home of consumers is unlikely to be advanced above the present price of nine cents a quart.

BLAMES WOMEN'S CLOTHING FOR CRIME
MILWAUKEE, July 22.—Women's clothing designed to display feminine charms is the cause of crime, and is an open invitation for insult, according to Judge Barker of the Milwaukee Municipal Court. The comment was called forth by the statement that the murderer of Julia Underhill in New York was driven insane by beautiful modern women.

"These dresses," Judge Barker said, "are an invitation to men to commit crimes. Girls' nature is weak, and I often see and hear testimony to prove that these girls are involved and which we could go back to the days of boyhood when such display of form was unknown."

MARGARET ANGLIN A WORMS CREDITOR
NEW YORK, July 22.—Margaret A. Worms, who was reported to be a millionaire, was hopelessly indebted to the city of New York. A report of her estate will be filed with the Surrogate today. Among the list of creditors of the stock broker is Margaret Anglin, the actress. Mrs. Anglin, who was in the market and a client of the broker, has a claim against the estate for $25,000, which is said to be due on a stock account.

LADY PAGET AVOIDS SOCIETY IN IRELAND
DUBLIN, July 22.—Society people in Dublin are extremely disappointed to learn that Lady Paget, the brilliant American beauty, will only come to Ireland when absolutely necessary. Her husband, Sir Arthur Paget, has been commander-in-chief of the forces in Ireland for five years, and his official residence is the Royal Dublin, Dublin.

NAVAL CUTTER PITS OVER: TWO DROWN
KÖNIGSBERG, Germany, July 22.—A naval cutter from the draughtship Thuroff, consisting of British officers and men, going ashore, captured today. Two officers were drowned and six others are in a serious condition.

Weish Found After Long Search.
One man, Richard Weish, has already been arrested by the Worcester police in connection with Leavitt's death. Leavitt was found, scarcely conscious, in an area way back of No. 9 Bowdoin street, Worcester. He was found lying on the ground, a serious blow from some blunt instrument.

Mrs. Charles Frisbie, living next door, discovered the body. She saw four men slipping away from the spot, and her description of one of them four is the clearest which the police have.

Weish was found after a search that lasted four hours. He was wearing a "The Island" on Military street and was loaded with a suitcase. He was arrested at the scene, but later changed his statement and said he was not at the time of the murder.

Leavitt arrived in Worcester from Boston about 10 Saturday night after that time which the police have, and it is not known how he was enticed to the spot where he was murdered.

Commerce Chamber Has Six "Don'ts" to Protect the Unwary

It being the open season for "Don'ts," the Boston Chamber of Commerce has issued its own list of "Six Commandments" which may save you money. They appear in today's Chamber of Commerce News. Here they are:

DON'T give cash to anyone, for any charity.

DON'T make your check payable to the order of the person to whom you are giving it to the treasurer, and mail it.

DON'T pay for anything until you see the ad.

DON'T rely on credit cards or lists of subscribers; both may be faked, and use them after authority is shown has been withdrawn.

DON'T believe what the advertiser says just because he is well dressed and a smooth talker.

The News adds to the list of "Don'ts" the following:

A frequent practice is for advertisers to retain credit cards when sold, and use them after authority is shown has been withdrawn.

Another trick of the trade is for one advertiser to borrow, beg or steal from another advertiser his list of dealer names from the list which contains especially good buyers.

WOMEN CLAMP THE LID ON NEWPORT
NEWPORT, July 22.—Women are today in control of more than most social affairs in Newport. In their fight for a city that will "keep the lid down" they have won.

As a result there were no salooning business on Sunday, the bars were all closed at the last hour Saturday night, and the city's reputation for gambling has been suppressed and other evils corrected.

Upon the reports gathered by detectives that the women and which were submitted to Governor Foster, he directed Sheriff Wilbur to take strict measures to see that the illegal places were closed.

Newport, the "lightly" city, is the center of the Atlantic coast no longer as it was when it was the center of the world.

Murder as a Fine Art in New York

A Man Who Had Been a Gambler for Thirty-five Years in New York Prospered Until He Quarreled with a Powerful Police Official. Then He Made His First Mistake—"Squealed"—So He Is Dead and Buried

I. Rosenthal, gambler and criminal, "squealed." He told how Police Lieutenant Becker, in charge of a police squad, became his partner, how he had shared his profits, how they finally quarreled. Rosenthal next made trouble for Becker among other gamblers. Becker then tried to drive him out of New York. Lieutenant Becker kept a policeman within the doors of Rosenthal's dwelling twenty-four hours a day, in eight-hour watches, for ninety consecutive days and nights. This was not execution of the law. It was lawless police oppression. Rosenthal was not even under indictment.

II. On the nineteenth day of this oppression the worm, Rosenthal, turned. He talked to the newspapers. His charges were corroborated in part by public records. He said Lieutenant Becker loaned him $1,500 and had taken twenty per cent. of the gambling profits. Becker had assigned Jack Rose, he said, to deal in Rosenthal's house and to collect for Lieutenant Becker.

III. A chattel mortgage securing this $1,500, loaned to Rosenthal, was drawn by Lawyer Robert H. Hibbard of No. 220 Broadway. The money was taken to the lawyer's office by Rose, Becker's man. Lawyer Hibbard tells the Grand Jury he heard that Becker, and not Rose, furnished the money, but he did not know. Hibbard, the lawyer, had acted for Lieutenant Becker's wife and for Becker's brothers in other transactions.

IV. Rosenthal's charges led Commissioner Waldo to telegraph to District Attorney Whitman at Newport, asking him to investigate. Mr. Whitman returns by the next train to New York and hears Rosenthal's story. Rosenthal promises to produce the next day six other gamblers to corroborate his charge. Even while Whitman is listening to Rosenthal's story the police are busy collecting evidence to drive Rosenthal out of town. THE CHIEF POLICE AGENT IN GETTING THIS EVIDENCE IS LIEUTENANT BECKER'S FRIEND, JACK ROSE.

V. Rose goes to Rosenthal's first wife, Dora Gilbert, now living an exemplary life at No. 181 East Twenty-seventh street. She is forced to tell a long, revolting, hideous story and swear to it—1,500 words—for use as a weapon against Rosenthal. Rose does this. News of this affidavit is sent to Rosenthal.

VI. But Rosenthal, though a gambler and a criminal, seems not to have been a coward. He answered that he would tell District Attorney Whitman all he knew about the police the next morning and would produce six witnesses to corroborate him.

VII. What does Lieutenant Becker's friend Rose next do? He acts promptly. He engages automobile No. 41313, owned by Libby and Shapiro, two confidants of gamblers. He goes first to Fuglist Sharkey's saloon, on East Fourteenth street, near Third avenue, where it picks up two men, WITH ROSE. Thence it goes up town to "Bridgy" Webber's gambling house, northwest corner of Sixth avenue and Forty-second street, where ROSE LEAVES THE AUTOMOBILE AND EXTENDS WEBBER'S ALIBI at midnight. Auto 41313 then goes up town to ROSE'S BROTHER'S HOUSE, IN WEST ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-FIFTH STREET, WHERE IT PICKS UP TWO MORE MEN, NAMES UNKNOWN. The auto then speeds down Broadway to Long Acre square, turns east into Forty-third street and stops a few doors east of Broadway, near the Metropole.

VIII. Rosenthal has been called to the Metropole. He sits in the cab at 12:30 a. m.—waiting. He smokes, but does not drink. He sits—waiting. Finally some one on the side door opens and says: "Hello, Herman, some one at the door wants to speak to you." As he crosses the threshold in the glowing white light of Broadway—the street that knows no night—four men surround him and he is shot dead. Automobile 41313, with both side doors left open, by the assassin, waits half a block away. The assassin turns left and it speeds away. Not even the number of the car is taken by policemen, five of whom were within fifteen seconds. District Attorney Whitman says after investigation: "Not even a serious effort to pursue the murderers was made."

IX. But Bridgy Webber, whose house, three blocks away, Rose had entered barely an hour earlier, is near the Metropole, and is one of the first to "hear" of the assassination, and he slips around the corner—possibly back to his own house—to report to Rose what the assassin did and how they did it.

X. Shapiro, the chauffeur of the assassin's auto, says he was told after the murder that he had nothing to fear—that the police would not interfere with the "get-away," as they had been fixed. This Shapiro's lawyer, Aaron Levy, tells.

Two innocent bystanders had, however, caught the number of the assassin's auto. One of them, Gallagher, went to the Forty-seventh street station, reported the number and was LOCKED UP FOR HIS TROUBLE, AND THE NUMBER WAS PUT DOWN ERRONEOUSLY ON THE POLICE BLOTTER by the officer in charge. The other witness, Coupe, gave the number of the auto to the reporters, and so it got out! The arrest of the chauffeur and owner of the car then speedily followed.

XI. It transpired twenty-four hours later that Lieutenant Becker's friend Rose had hired the car. Was Rose then hunted by the police like a dangerous wild animal? Was a general alarm sent out for his arrest? No. It was not necessary. The police knew exactly where he was. Lieutenant Becker slipped to Far Rockaway. Rose was in seclusion there. As Commissioner Dougherty's official statement put it: "We sent word to Rose to come to Police Headquarters." Rose marched up to Police Headquarters alone and—unfraid.

HE IS NOW IN THE TOMBS. THE GAMBLER, ROSENTHAL, IS DEAD—AND ALREADY BURIED—WHERE HE CAN TELL NO MORE TALES. LIEUTENANT BECKER'S FRIEND ROSE WILL UNDOUBTEDLY PROVE AN ALIBI—HE WAS NOT WHERE THE MURDER WAS COMMITTED. POLICE LIEUTENANT BECKER IS NOT EVEN SUSPENDED FROM DUTY. HE IS NOT UNDER THE SLIGHTEST SUSPICION. NO GAMBLER'S WORD IS WORTH A FIG!

1.—CORNERED: Here Rosenthal is unable for the moment to escape from Heroes Tat and Wilson, but he distracts their attention with a nature-faking disguise.

2.—THE WAGER: Here Rosenthal now challenges Heroes Tat and Wilson to let the dokey and the elephant race against his mascot, the B. Moose.

3.—TERROR: Desperate Desmond Prohibition terrifies Rosenthal by telling her that he will put her suitors out of business.

4.—THE DISGUISE: Prohibition, wearing the disguise of a moose head, gets along the track where the three mascots are racing.

5.—SUCCESS: As the Moose races along he falls a victim to the lure of the dokey and rushes away from his official disguise.

6.—AFTER HIM: Here Rosenthal rides the Camel over the sands. He guesses the animal will head for the water wagon. Monday we shall continue the story.

Divine Forgiveness

By WINIFRED BLACK

I knew another man who did the same thing, but for quite a different reason.

He went away on a long journey, and while he was gone a man he knew made a fool of his wife's eyes, and she threw her good name in the winds and followed her false friend, who brought her poor little self to the land of Apsara. And when her husband knew he went after his wife, and he found her home and comforted her, and stood by her, and no one ever stirred to find in the man that she was not his wife, and the wife and the other man knew of the husband's heart-breaking story.

And all who knew the real story of the affair admired and respected the man, for they knew that he did not mind his comfort, but to have his wife was a foolish, light-headed girl, and that the husband should not have left her alone so long. And they knew that he took her back, not to gratify a whim of his own, not to minister to his comfort, but to have her and keep her as matter what she was, just because she could make him comfortable, but because he loved her in the higher sense. He loved her enough to protect her from her own folly and her own carelessness. And in all his little world as man would move in the light of virtue and friendship that that man.

Another I know once, long ago, in the city.

A girl came from an orphan asylum to a great city. She was in love with a boy who had been at the same orphan asylum and she was in love with her, and they had promised to marry each other as soon as the boy had a home for her.

She went to the wild lands and took up a claim, and in time built a little house of logs, and wrote the girl that he was coming to take her home. And when the girl received the letter she was in a hospital very ill, and she had in her arms a little child, a child of misery and despair.

She was very young and very beautiful, and the man who had brought her to the orphan asylum was a man of experience and of cunning, and she had had no more chance against him than a little shivering, white rabbit against a snake.

So she wrote the boy she really loved in spite of it all and told him she could never be his wife's wife, and told him plainly.

And the boy who was brought up in the orphan did not write and answer. He went instead to the great city and to the hospital, and there he was waiting for the girl, and when the letter and the girl came to the ground and kissed the great square house he wrote, and so could the girl be brought home to her mother's home, a growing family, and the rest of his life was growing up to be the boy and stay of it.

I think that husband and wife have forgotten everything but their mutual love and trust.

What shall you do, oh man with the struggling will? Search your own heart and find there the answer.

How an Alien May Take Out Naturalization Papers

In order to become a naturalized citizen the alien must go before a judge and state his intention of renouncing his allegiance to his native country, and state his desire to become a citizen of the United States.

Some specific duties of citizenship are these:

1. Respecting the rights and privileges of citizens and aliens.
2. Performing civic duties honorably, and without yielding to the temptation of private gain.
3. The payment of debts.
4. The respect of other citizen's religion.
5. The same respect for another's religion that you demand for your own.
6. The willingness to defend the country that protects you in time of peace.
7. Most men are long on demanding their rights.

A true citizen should be just as anxious to know his duty and to do it.

GOVERNOR EUGENE N. FOSS will be the editor of next Sunday's AMERICAN. That what he will have to say will interest mightily every citizen of Massachusetts and of New England can be assured in advance. The Governor is a man who sees, hears, thinks and acts, and to some purpose. If you have the welfare of this section of the country at heart, you simply cannot afford to miss next Sunday's AMERICAN.

YESTERDAY'S Sunday AMERICAN, edited by Governor Bass of New Hampshire, like that of the previous Sunday, edited by Governor Plaiside of Maine, aroused a widespread public interest. It is not too much to say that it marked an epoch in New England journalism.

YOU should secure and preserve every one of these "Governors' Editions" of the Sunday AMERICAN. There has never been anything like them before. There will be two more after Governor Foss', Governor Aram J. Fother of Rhode Island will be the editor of the Sunday AMERICAN of August 4, and Governor John A. Mead of Vermont will edit the issue of Sunday, August 11.

The Education of the Voter

No. 10—Who Are Citizens?

By THOMAS TAPPER

I. The strict meaning of the word, a citizen is one who enjoys the rights and privileges of the city where he lives. But as we use the word in reference to the republic, it means the rights and privileges that belong to you as the resident of the city, state and nation.

In this sense the word is used much as we use the word man. He has rights and privileges as an individual. When we call him a citizen, we add to his rights and privileges a group of duties called responsibilities and duties.

Every individual that walks the streets may think he is a free agent, but he has rights, privileges, responsibilities and duties toward (1) himself, (2) his family, (3) his neighbors, (4) his city or town, (5) the State, (6) the republic at large. And they do not stop even here.

The Constitution did not make it clear exactly what is meant by the word "citizen," and the twelfth article of amendment was introduced and adopted to settle the matter.

II. To attain the dignity of citizenship in the United States is to receive assurance of rights and privileges that are numerous and valuable. Every citizen becomes the recipient of benefits both from the State in which he resides and from the nation. As a citizen you can do all these things and many more:

1. Inquire and protect your property.
2. Pursue your ambition fearlessly, if it be a lawful ambition.
3. Adopt and practice the religion of your choice.
4. Have freedom of speech (being responsible for what you say).
5. The right of jury trial.
6. The assurance of security to yourself, your family and possessions.
7. The assurance that, on shall not be imprudent for debt, unless fraud be involved.
8. The right freely to assemble with other citizens and petition for the redress of grievances (This is the Initiative or the Recall, according to the nature of the grievance).
9. These are a few of the distinct rights and privileges that are the reward of citizenship. You will not fail to notice that every one of these INCLUDES a duty and a responsibility. For every privilege you enjoy is the privilege of every other citizen. And YOU CANNOT GET LIFT OR HINDERANCE IN HIS WAY.

Here Are Six Specific Duties a Citizen Should Perform

1. Respecting the rights and privileges of citizens and aliens.
2. Performing civic duties honorably, and without yielding to the temptation of private gain.
3. The payment of debts.
4. The respect of other citizen's religion.
5. The same respect for another's religion that you demand for your own.
6. The willingness to defend the country that protects you in time of peace.

Most men are long on demanding their rights.

A true citizen should be just as anxious to know his duty and to do it.

"The family finger." My dad, he says the poor man's got no chance, an' never had. No matter how you cast your vote The times is just to me as if. But still it looks to me as if 'Twould help a lot to work The country up the hill again If I did would go to work.
